RareBooksClub. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 74 pages. OCLC Number: (OCoLC)57707194 Subject: United States -- Armed Forces -- Reserves -- Pay, allowances, etc. -- Evaluation. Excerpt: . . . Mobilized reserve component soldiers who are in medical holdover are 10 attached to a medical hold unit and would typically apply for ADME 11 orders through that unit. If identified during demobilization, injured or ill soldiers would typically apply for ADME orders through the garrison support unit, which handles the mobilization and demobilization of reserve component soldiers. However, similar to soldiers injured during weekend drills or annual training, mobilized soldiers may also apply for ADME orders through their reserve component home state units. As shown in figure 1, reserve component soldiers wishing to be extended on active duty for medical treatment or evaluation are to submit an active duty medical extension order application packet to Army Manpower. 10 Medical hold units handle command and control for active duty and mobilized reserve component soldiers who are not medically fit for duty. These units may sometimes be found at Army military medical treatment facilities, including Army hospitals. 11 According to Procedural Guidance for Reserve Component Soldiers on Active Duty Medical Extension, Section 8b, the soldiers ADME request is required to be submitted through whoever has command and control over the soldier at the time of request . Some installations chose to have the garrison support unit (GSU) remain as the soldiers command and control authority until their original mobilization orders expired. Therefore, the initial ADME request would be submitted through the GSU instead of the medical hold unit. Page 11 GAO-05-125 Military Pay This item ships from La Vergne,TN. Paperback.
