Excerpt: . . . we will be able to explore how best to craft telecommunications provisions in trade agreements. Should they be broad, leaving domestic regulatory authorities to fill in the blanks Or should they be detailed, locking in rules now that will dictate how domestic telecommunications markets are regulated This hearing will explore these and other issues. I will conclude by stating that I look forward to continuing this subcommittees oversight over trade issues, especially when those trade issues affect a topic like telecommunication that is a core jurisdictional responsibility of this committee. At this point, the distinguished ranking member from New York, Mr. Towns. Mr. Towns. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Let me begin by thanking you for holding this hearing on such an important part of our economy, particularly with many telecom companies struggling and some even going out of business. A public official once said that principles were the most important thing to have in politics, and that his most important principle was flexibility. I am strongly in favor of securing Americas interest when we...
