Few men have been for so long a time in the public eye and the life record of none has been more varied in character, more for reaching or valuable in its effects. Constant in honor, fearless in conduct and stainless in reputation, General Dodge has long been accorded classification with the most distinguished citizens of the Empire Country. While his business interests have covered a wide scope, extending into all parts of the Union, he has during the greater part of his life maintained his home in Council Bluffs and among his friends and neighbors those who know his personal character aside from his public connections - he is accorded the warmest friendship and highest esteem. A native of Massachusetts, General Dodge was born in Danvers on the 12th of April, 1831. His father, Sylvanus Dodge, was born in Rowley, Massachusetts, in 1801, and died in Council Bluffs on the 23rd of December, 1871. The family come of English ancestry, although in its lineal and collateral branches it has been distinctively American through many generations. The founder of the family in the new world was Richard Dodge, a native of England, who in 1629 joined the Plymouth colony in company with his brother William, General Dodge of this review being one of Richards descendants in the ninth generation. In the maternal line he comes...
