Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Mayflower: And the Pilgrim Fathers We are met this evening to refresh our memories on one of the most remarkable events in the world s history. However you test it by comparison with cognate incidents in ancient or modern times, the departure from this country of the body of men who are known as the Pilgrim Fathers stands out as a colossal event productive of consequences unsurpassed in the history of humanity. Bodies of colonists have gone from mother countries in all ages; sometimes as the result of differences with the ruling power at home, as in this case; sometimes sent forth with the benediction and at the expense of the parent nation; but no colony ever achieved a tithe of the success achieved by this English band of colonists whose objects and principles I have come here this evening to give some account of. The Pilgrim Fathers, as you know, were not men of Devon. Indeed the contrast between them and the famous Devonians of their time is marked and noteworthy. The great men of Devon, such as Walter Raleigh, Richard Grenville, Francis Drake, and John Hawkins, usually went forth for the express purpose of adventure, or conquest, or discovery, or for the acquisition of wealth. The Pilgrim Fathers went forth for none of these objects; but, as the great English poet Milton says of them, they were faithful and free-born Englishmen and good Christians constrained to forsake their dearest homes, their friends and kindred, whom nothing but the wide ocean and the savage deserts of America could hide and shelter from the fury of the Bishops.
